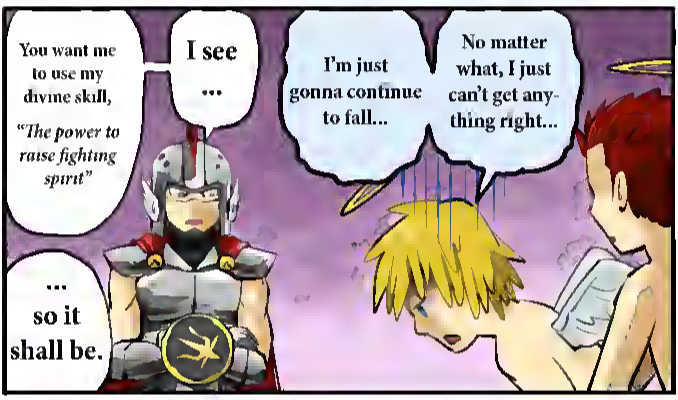
TL Note: *of heaven, presumably, since the kanji for "Fallen Angel" was used



You want me to use my divine skill,
"The power to raise fighting spirit"
I see ...
... so it shall be.

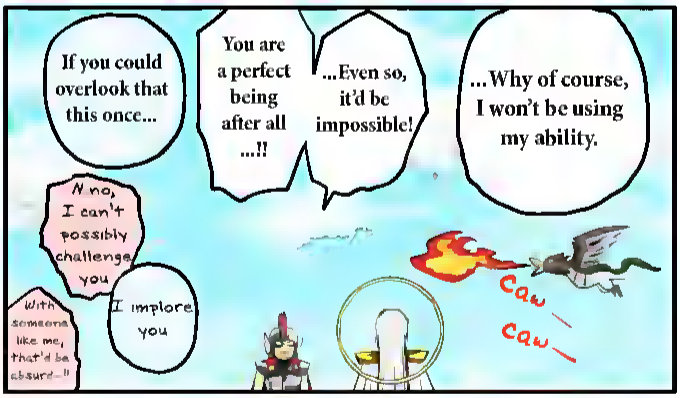
Against your divine ability, "The power to be superior to others" I wouldn't stand a chance...!!
No...no way... To compete with Lord Supreme himself would be folly...!



If you could overlook that this once...
You are a perfect being after all ...!!
...Even so, it'd be impossible!
...Why of course, I won't be using my ability.
N no, I can't possibly challenge you
I implore you
With someone like me, that'd be absurd...!!

TL Note

More punny names!

愛神 - Aijin - Love (Goddess of Lovers)
The kanji spells out "Love" and "God".
It is read the same as 愛人, which means "Lover"

武神 - Bujin - Warlord (God of Battles)
The kanji spells out "The art of war/Military officer" and "God".
It is read the same as 武人, which means "Warrior/Soldier"

In addition, the 喝 in this panel is another pun in itself.

Pronounced "katsu," which can mean, "To win," the kanji itself refers to an exclamation used to scold practitioners in Zen.
Damn pageratta, your puns are deep.

Once again, thanks to /r/manga for the feedback on the punny names.
